The 13th annual National Police Memorial Day was held on Sunday 25 September 2016 at St Paul's Cathedral in London and we were once again honoured to have our patron HRH The Prince of Wales attend.

Around 2,000 former colleagues and family members of fallen officers were present to celebrate the lives and honour the sacrifices of those that have died whilst on duty. In addition to officers' loved ones, the congregation included policing officials and representatives from around the UK, over 40 Chief Constables and Police and Crime Commissioners; senior figures from the Police Federation of England and Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland and UK Home Secretary Amber Rudd MP.

This was the fifth year that HRH The Prince of Wales has attended the service, and he took the time to meet and talk with fallen officers' loved ones at a private reception held in the magnificent crypt in St Paul's Cathedral.

During the service, candles were lit by relatives who mourn their loved ones and in remembrance of officers lost throughout the country. Candles were lit by Abigail Phillips, daughter of Constable Dave Phillips, Merseyside Police; Gaynor James, mother of Constable Andrew Lloyd James, South Wales Police; Andrea Irvine, widow of part-time Constable Kenneth Thomas Irvine, PSNI; Elaine Gordon, daughter of Sergeant Alan Ewen Gordon, Grampian Police.

Home Secretary, Amber Rudd, gave a reading during the service, paying tribute to the extraordinary bravery that officers show day in, day out, tackling dangerous situations in order to keep our families, communities and country safe.

"It is my honour to take part in National Police Memorial Day and pay tribute to the courageous police officers who have fallen in the line of duty and the families that are left behind."

The Act of Dedication was delivered by Ian Dyson QPM, Commissioner of City of London Police, who later said: "Police officers play an ever-present role in our day-to-day lives, always on hand when we need them to help, to reassure, and to act. Sometimes, however, we take them for granted.

"That's why days like today are so important, giving us an opportunity to pay our respects to police officers who have made the ultimate sacrifice to protect their communities."

Steve White, Chair, Police Federation of England and Wales, read the names of officers who have lost their lives during the past year: Constable Douglas Wiggins, Police Scotland; Constable Sahib Lalli, Metropolitan Police Service; and Constable Dave Phillips, Merseyside Police.

A message from The Prince of Wales paid tribute to those officers "who had paid the ultimate sacrifice while safeguarding our families, our communities and our liberty".

Sergeant Joe Holness QPM said: "For me personally, today was undoubtedly the most poignant service in the history of National Police Memorial Day. This was my last service as national co-ordinator and to gather again where the inaugural service took place is somewhat surreal.

"National Police Memorial Day was an idea borne out of tragedy and I would never have dreamed that the charity and service would progress to have the standing it has today.

"I extend my gratitude to everyone who attended today's service and for their ongoing support. It was a day filled with emotion but also with immense pride, and I know it meant a lot to the families and friends of our fallen colleagues to have our Patron The Prince of Wales with us today."

This year's service will take place at St David's Hall in Cardiff on Sunday 24 September 2017.

St David's Hall, Cardiff

How to get there

By Car

The major road route into Cardiff is the M4 motorway.

From the East:

Visitors travelling on the M4 from the East are advised to leave the M4 at junction 32 and follow the A470 (1st exit at roundabout) into the centre of Cardiff.

From the West:

Visitors travelling on the M4 from the West are advised to leave the M4 at junction 33 and join the A4232 (3rd exit at roundabout). You then have the option of either exiting the A4232 at the next roundabout and following signs for Cardiff city centre, or alternatively, if you remain on the A4232, it will eventually lead you to Cardiff Bay.

From the South West:

Visitors travelling from the South West of England should head North along the M5 motorway and then follow signs for South Wales and the M4.

From the Midlands and North:

Visitors travelling from the Midlands and the North of England should head for the M50 motorway (junction 8 on the M5 motorway) and then onto the A40 (signposted South Wales, Monmouth). Continue along the A40 until you reach Monmouth when the road becomes the A449. Continue along the A449 until you reach the Coldra roundabout where you should take the 5th exit to join the M4.

Car Parking

There is a multi storey pay and display car park which can be found at St Davids 2 shopping mall. Please follow the signs to alternative parking.
